INTERNET SKILLS — SECURITY

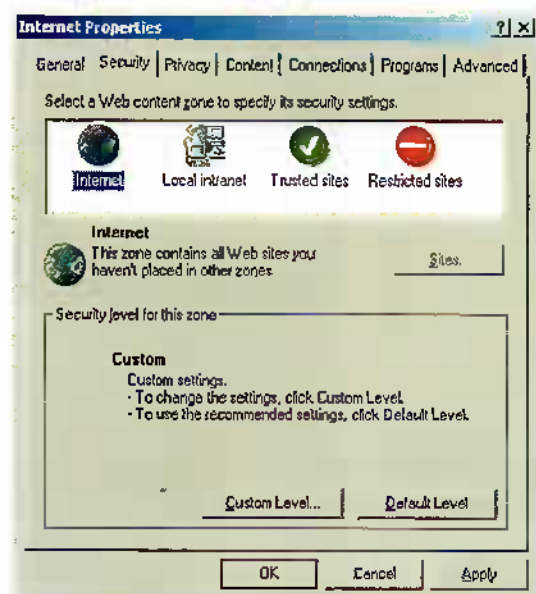

Use the following information to answer questions 27 to 30.

This screen shot from Internet Explorer shows the control panel for Internet Properties opened at the Security tab.

Internet Explorer divides the Internet into zones so that, for example, a school teacher can assign a Web site to a zone with a suitable security level.

The four zones are:

- Internet – contains all Web sites not placed in other zones
- Local intranet – contains all Web sites on the school's network
- Trusted sites – contains Web sites that can be trusted not to damage a computer or data
- Restricted sites – contains Web sites that could potentially damage a computer or data or are considered unsuitable

Each zone can be set to have a different security level. Whenever you open or download content from the Web, Internet Explorer checks the security settings for that Web site's zone.

27 Which zone would the teacher set at a security level of High?

- (A) Internet
- (B) Local intranet
- (C) Trusted sites
- (D) Restricted sites

- (A) there are only a few Web sites that can be trusted not to cause damage.
- (B) all Web sites are automatically in this zone unless put into another zone.
- (C) there is an enormous number of Web sites on the Internet.
- (D) the only way to access Web sites is on the Internet.
